Cancer recurrence is the leading cause of mortality in Ewing sarcoma. The existence of dormant or cancer stem–like population has been proposed to explain the reason for the late (> five years) rate of cancer recurrence. There is an imminent need for the identification of unique markers that identify molecular programs regulating